TURKEY BREAKS WITH GERMANY; THE SEVERANCE DOES NOT MEAN TURKEY WILL ENTER WAR ON SIDE OF ALLIES

Future Action in This Respect Will Depend on Attitude Taken by Germany, Premier Saracoglu States — Cabinet Decision Approved by National Assembly

LONDON—Turkey severed diplomatic and economic relations with the Reich today and left the decision of whether the Turks will go to war against Germany up to the Nazis themselves.

The decision of Turkey to cut its ties with the Germans after Ambassador Franz Von Papen reportedly made an 11th hour attempt to maintain relations was announced by the Turkish radio.

The Turkish government, meanwhile, announced officially that diplomatic and economic relations with Nazi Germany will be severed at midnight.

Announcement of the rupture was made by Premier and Acting Foreign Minister Sukru Saracoglu in an address to the Grand National Assembly in Ankara.

Whether Turkey will take up arms against the Reich depends entirely on the attitude which Germany now will take, Saracoglu said.

The Premier emphasized that the move by Turkey did not necessarily mean entry into the war as a belligerent on the side of the Allies but implied that if the Germans gave evidence of hostile reaction the Turks might go over into the Allied camp.

The decision of the cabinet to sever relations was not unexpected since it had been rumored for several days that Turkey was prepared to cut its ties and possibly grant the United Nations use of Turkish bases in accordance with an alliance with the British.

The cabinet's decision was approved by the National Assembly, the broadcast said.

NEW YORK, Aug. 2—(INS)—Turkey broke relations with Germany today, according to a Turkish home radio broadcast.

Premier Sukru Saracoglu announced that the Turks had broken off diplomatic and economic relations with the Reich, said the broadcast reported by the FCC.

The broadcast said Saracoglu, speaking before the Grand National Assembly in Ankara, stated that the Turkish cabinet, in making its decision to break with Germany, emphasized that the severance of relations did not mean Turkey would enter the war on the side of the Allies.

Future action in this respect, said Saracoglu, would depend on the attitude taken by Germany.

The Turkish transmitter said the cabinet decision had been approved by the National Assembly.

HOMESICK PLENTY NOW

DENVER—(INS)—Billy Frank New, who is 20 and in serious trouble, agrees that "homesickness" is one of the most serious maladies with which a man can suffer. New was one of four men who escaped from the Denver county jail in a sensational break. He and a companion, McLaughlin K. Brookes, 27, were recaptured near Houston, Tex. "I was homesick and just had to see my folks again," New explained to officers, when he was returned to Denver.

HERE AND THERE IN BUCKS COUNTY TOWNS

Activities of Interest To All In The Various Communities

GLEANED BY SCRIBES

Abram G. Metz, Mainland butcher, has been selected as the first minister of the Perkiomenville Mennonite Mission.

Mr. Metz was chosen in the traditional casting of lots at the church from a field of four nominees. There was a more-than-capacity congregation for the service.

The other candidates named by the congregation for possible selection were Isaac Alderfer, Lansdale; R. D. Isahiah Alderfer, Harleysville; and Walter Alderfer, Telford, R. D.

Bishop Nevin Bender, Delaware, delivered the sermon, and Bishop Arthur Ruth, Line Lexington, ordained the chosen man immediately after the lot-casting. Assisting bishops were Rev. John Lapp, Lansdale, and Rev. Warren Bean Creamery.

The last of a series of community services held this season on the lawn of Salem Reformed Church, Doylestown, and sponsored by the Doylestown Christian Council took place Sunday evening with a large number of persons in attendance.

The service was in recognition of the 25th anniversary of the pastorate of the Reformed Church, Doylestown, on August 6, 1919.

Representing the laymen and the community at large, Judge Hiram H. Keller gave a short talk, during which he commented upon the work of Dr. Freeman since he became pastor here.

The sermon, which also was appropriate to the occasion, was delivered by Rev. Alexander B. Davidson, pastor of the Methodist church. Vocal solos were rendered by Mrs. Lauretta Carver Worthington, who was accompanied by Mrs. Walter J. Groman.

The Reformed congregation will celebrate the 25th anniversary of Dr. Freeman's pastorate next Sunday.

Attendance at the sale of real estate and personal property of the late Jennie K. Edwards, Doylestown, on Saturday afternoon was quite large and throughout the auction, during which E. Newlin Brown, of this place, served as auctioneer good prices were received.

The real estate, which consisted of a one and one-half story frame bungalow at 443 Maple avenue, was sold to an undisclosed buyer for $5800.

Included among the household articles were a large number of antiques, most of which brought good prices. A set of old blue dishes went to the highest bidder for $41, and coverlets ranged in price from $12 to $15. Various types of glassware also sold quite readily.

After several rapid rounds of bidding a maple bed was sold for $75, and old-fashioned parlor lamps sold very well for $3 to $8.

Setting aside their duties for the day, the members and friends of Middletown Grange took out time Sunday to attend a picnic in the meadow on the farm of Mr. and Mrs. John Thompson, Newtown township.

Approximately 80 members and friends attended the event, which

INSURANCE AGAINST TYRANNY

(Doylestown Intelligencer, August 2nd)

From the dawn of civilization, man has mastered the world by being able to use dangerous implements and forces. Fire, wind and running water, steam, gunpowder and electricity—each has been harnessed.

The cunning with which mankind has controlled these unwilling servants has left a permanent mark on human intelligence. Boldness is no more important than prudence. Ingenuity finds tools, caution makes them usable. Therefore we have bridles for horses, jockeysticks for bulls, sheaths for knives, safety-catches for guns, brakes for automobiles.

When communities began, man found government useful but dangerous. The need for controlling government has been one of the driving forces of human endeavor. Through all the centuries of history we can trace the struggle for mastery between peoples and their governments.

The struggle is still going on. We can watch its development in the United States, as well as see its results in the rest of the world. The present war is merely further proof of a well-demonstrated fact — desolation results when government is allowed to get beyond the control of the people who put it in power.

No one can fail to be impressed by reflecting how much better off the German people would be today if they had permitted Hitler to become only what he proclaimed himself, "the leader," and had prevented his becoming what he really strove for, the master.

For more than ten years after the end of the first World War, the German people had reasonably effective control of their government. Hitler did not seize power so much as take it by fraud. When he suppressed the authority of the Reichstag, it was not so much a revolution as a swindle.

He became dictator by promising the German people material and spiritual benefits. He had no real interest in whether they got these benefits—in fact, he knew they could not be achieved. What he wanted was power. He got it by promises he never intended to keep.

The American people have been in control of their government for more than a century and a half. The Constitution binds public officials to public will by means of certain restrictions and limitations upon official authority.

These checks and balances have never impeded a chief executive willing to be part of a team, willing to perform his duties within the scope of the Constitutional plan. But they have been a recurring source of annoyance and irritation to such Presidents as have attempted one-man rule.

Whatever may have been the motive, the effect of the plausible arguments of the New Deal for twelve years—"Give us the power; we will make you more secure"—is just as dangerous to the people of this nation as were the similar pleas which made Hitler master of Germany. It is a political swindle to ask people to surrender

MAN'S BODY FOUND ALONG RIVER SHORE

Corpse Identified As That of Ernest W. Zaehring, Bristol Township

MISSING FOR 2 WEEKS

The body of the man found in the marshes off Mouth Apron, below the Mill street boat wharf, yesterday afternoon, was later identified as that of Ernest W. Zaehring, 53, Orchard avenue, Bristol Township.

The finding of the body was reported to the Bristol police by Arthur Swangler, who had been informed of its presence by two men in a row boat who gave their names as James Boyle, 333 East Pearl street, and Wade Daniels, colored, 133 East Pearl street, Burlington, N. J. The two were rowing along the edge of the "creeks" when they saw the body. Swangler was standing on the shore near the "Point" when the two Burlington men called to him. The body was in the ducks about 30 feet from the "Point." It was lying below the high water mark with an arm and a leg partly over a log as it washed there with high water. The body was fully clothed.

Officers Esterline and Bartle responded and summoned Bucks County Alfred Rigby, Rigby was rowed to the scene and then Officer Bartle and the Coroner procured a rope and in the rescue boat of Goodwill Fire Co., No. 3, towed the body into the water and removed it to a point favorable to be taken ashore.

The body was then removed to the morgue of George Molden. Zaehring resided with his son, William, and for a time was employed as a carpenter at the Hunter Manufacturing Corp. He is survived by his wife Helen, one son, of Bristol, and a brother, Otto, of Florida. Mr. Zaehring had lived here for eight years.

According to the man's surviving son, Zaehring has been missing for about two weeks. He was known to frequent the Mill street boat wharf and it is presumed that he fell into the Delaware river. The body may have been washed onto the marshes and evidently had been there for a number of days.

The Zaehring for a time made their home on Wilson avenue, Bristol.

Zaehring, a few years ago, conducted a second-hand furniture store on Mill street, opposite the Grand Theatre.

The Rev. Edward K. Knottler, pastor of Harriman Methodist Church, will conduct the service on Thursday at the convenience of the family.

SCHOOL BOARD TO CONSIDER FUTURE BUILDING PROGRAM

Will Consult Architect and Visit Some Modern School Buildings

WANTS TO HAVE DATA

H. Stackhouse, Catasauqua, Named Physical Education Director and Coach

Some post-war thinking along the lines of additional school facilities was indulged in last night by the Bristol School Board, which was in session four and one-half hours. The board is of the opinion that many of the school buildings here are so old that the upkeep is becoming costly and that more room is badly needed in several departments.

The Board decided to seek the advice of an architect and to visit some modern school buildings, in an effort to obtain ideas and information, so that when the time arrives to give more serious thought to the project the Board will be fortified with the necessary data.

Harold Stackhouse, Catasauqua, was elected physical education director and coach. He at once accepted the position pending his release from his present position. Stackhouse has been successful in coaching athletics and last year his team won the Lehigh Valley football championship. He has been coaching since 1929 and is also qualified to teach the sciences, history and social studies.

Two new faculty members were elected when Miss Margaret Nicholas, Mansfield, and John A. Campbell, Malvern, were named teachers. Miss Nicholas will teach English and commercial arithmetic, while Mr. Campbell will teach physics.

The resignations of Miss Elizabeth Forsyth, Phyllis K. Clark and Cardin Brown were accepted.

O'Donnell Brothers were awarded the contract to furnish 200 or more tons of bituminous coal at $9 per ton for delivery to the high school building and Jefferson avenue building, and at $8.80 per ton for delivery to the Washington street, Wood street and Bath street buildings.

The Board voted to again engage the services of a collecting agency to collect the per capita taxes due for the years 1942 and 1943.

Arrows Made Seven Hits and Seven Went Down on Strikes

TRENTON INDUSTRIAL LEAGUE Schedule for Tonight Eastern Aircraft - Voltz-Texaco (Edgely diamond) American Steel - Rohm & Haas (Maple Beach field)

TRENTON, N. J., Aug. 2—A home run from the bat of Claude Lodge with Calderone on base in the sixth inning represented all the Fleetwings' scoring last evening on Wetzell field as the league-leading Prison Officers downed the Wingers, 7-2, in an Industrial League match.

Calderone had walked when Lodge planted the ball over the right field fence for his second hit of the evening. The Arrows had seven hits and seven went down on strikes. The Wingers attempted a rally in the final frame when with two out, D'Ascendis singled and Heisler reached base on an error but Dugan whiffed for the third out.

Cy Bachman who hurled for the Bristol team ran into difficulty in the first inning when Risoldi reached base on an error, Sabo walked, and Broderick singled. The next two were infield outs but Barados singled for two more runs.

Walks to Barnhart and Jones, plus two errors, and a base hit by Hinzak gave the Trenton team another pair of runs in the sixth.

A win for the Eastern Aircraft team against Voltz-Texaco this evening will play the Trenton aircraft workers one full game behind the Fleetwings team for third place.

The Rohm & Haas team is making a desperate attempt to vacate the cellar and will meet the American Steel nine.

plies were offered to the North Carolina Department of Health to aid in handling of the 416 cases of infantile paralysis.

In a telephone conversation from North Carolina Sunday, Dr. Allen H. Moore, head of the medical division of the Bucks County Council, was informed that a check-up in that state showed the epidemic to be under control.

"If we need your equipment and emergency supplies, you can rest assured that we will send a driver for the ambulance," Dr. Moore was informed. "Your offer is deeply appreciated."

county veterans. The whole idea of sending our returning veterans to take up residence in Philadelphia or other points while receiving vocational training is not favorable to this committee, and we propose to do something about it."

County Superintendent Charles H. Boehm has said in this connection: "The opportunity for vocational training in Bucks county for returning veterans is just about sufficient to take care of about one or two per cent of our veterans. The need for expansion of existing facilities is apparent, and the possibilities for a new alignment should receive the active interest of all of us who expect our men to return soon to civil life."

"This," Mr. Murray says, "places the future life of thousands of veterans into safe hands for guidance, and we will not fail them."

work opportunities for Negroes.

War plant production fell from 25 to 70 percent on the first day of the strike, and even greater loss was threatened today. Retail business was practically at a standstill, and all bars and state liquor stores were closed as a precautionary measure.

Up to an early hour today, no serious injuries were reported from the violence outbreaks. Two white men in a coal truck were reportedly beaten by Negroes, and two other white men were dragged from a passenger car and beaten. A 16-year-old youth and a white woman driver were also beaten.

A Yellow Cab Company driver, who said he was under orders not to drive through the negro districts, reported that at least one cab had been stoned and overturned.

The share-the-ride spirit among private car owners, which enabled thousands of persons to get to their jobs yesterday, was not expected to prevail today, following the attacks on automobile operators.

Frank Carney, president of the former PRT employees union, which held a contract with the company until it was defeated in a national labor relations board election five months ago, declared frankly that "we don't want negroes and we won't work with negroes."

The TWU, which had protested the promotion of negro employees, announced that it has asked U. S. Attorney General Francis Biddle, to investigate, contending that the wildest walkout was inspired by enemy agents in the hope of inciting race riots and stalling production in the nation's second largest war industry area.

The War Manpower Commission directive, ordering the company to end its discriminatory hiring practice, went into effect last month.

Only eight negroes had been accepted for training as trainmen up to yesterday, and none of these had as yet operated a car other than one brief practice run.

Officials of the Army and Navy, War Production Board, War Labor Board and the union met late last night after fruitless efforts at each of the depots to get the workers to quit the work stoppage.

Dr. H. H. Bullitt, regional WPB director, indicated that he would request that troops be sent in if the situation does not improve today.

PTC officials, meanwhile, suggested the equal treatment for negroes be rescinded at least temporarily and the old personnel policy be reinstated. The plan was abandoned, however, when Federal spokesmen indicated that such action could be taken only at the company's responsibility.

Dr. A. A. Mitten, P. T. C. official, appealed to the idle workers to name their leaders "so we can talk to them in an effort to get them to go back to work."

The work stoppage, which began at 4 a. m. yesterday and became complete by early afternoon, left approximately 1900 street cars, 650 buses and the entire subway-elevated system idle. Only 10 per cent of the normal load of 1,500,000 passengers were carried before the breakdown, P. T. C. officials said. About 500,000 persons went to work in private cars under the share-the-ride plan, while the remaining 500,000 either walked or stayed home.

KNOW YOUR STATE

Since the official decennial census of population of April 1, 1940, estimates by several governmental agencies and private organizations have been made public. These estimates probably were more necessary in the past three years than at any time in our history because of the numerous population shifts which have occurred in many sections of our State and nation due to wartime industrial expansion. Many of these estimates differ in character and while most of them are useful for some purpose, care should be exercised in selecting the proper one and a thorough analysis made of its significance.

fundamental rights and protections in exchange for benefits and help which they could receive quite as well without sacrifice of independence and control of their government. Calling the benefits "Social Security" and "The More Abundant Life" doesn't lessen the deception which is involved.

There is no part of the Social Security program which could not have been carried out as well inside the Constitution as outside it. There never has been any excuse for using Social Security and other New Deal projects as levers to weaken our form of government.

Freedom is, after all, the most precious and important of the "social gains" mankind has ever made.

The Constitution puts the express train of government under a series of block-signal controls. These controls are for the protection of the people of this nation. But when the present administration really gets up steam, it is in too much of a hurry to want to slow down for amber and red lights.

What the New Deal has been asking is that the people of this nation permit it to discard all "Caution" and "Stop" signals, and allow the brain-trusters to operate only under green lights, as fast as they please, regardless of what may be ahead on the tracks.

agencies to determine the size of the current market, to compute per capita sales and for similar purposes. But to ascertain the trend of a community's permanent population since the prewar years and to estimate the number of future residents, the persons formerly inhabiting the area but now in the armed forces must be included.

A population estimate for Pennsylvania prepared by the State Planning Board of the Department of Commerce which is shortly to be released includes all types of persons, both civilian and military, but excludes those of the armed forces stationed in the Commonwealth who are residents of other states. This approximates the normal state of affairs. By recognizing our enlisted men as a part of our permanent population, we can form a more reliable estimate as to our future State and community problems than is possible by excluding them from our estimates.

VOLANT—(INS)—Fay Brocklehurst, 15-year-old heroine who has saved five persons from drowning at various times in the Volant mill pond, was rewarded by townfolk with a $100 war bond.

HARRISBURG—(INS)—A comparatively new field opened up for women when many wives took over nursery businesses as their husbands went into the armed services. According to the State Agriculture Department, they are doing a good job.

SLOW INFIELD HIT OF ANGELO GIVES ALCOA IX THE GAME

Diamond Nine Loses Game Played On Maple Beach Diamond

FINAL SCORE IS 6 TO 5

De Risi Had Just Relieved Wolvin When Angelo Hit a Single

A slow infield single from the bat of Tony Angelo gave the Alcoa team a 6-5 victory over Diamond last evening on the Maple Beach field. Angelo's hit in the seventh inning scored Freddie Hibbs from second base.

"Mike" DeRisi was on the mound when Angelo got his hit. DeRisi had just relieved Wolvin to pitch to Angelo. DeRisi then retired Thompson for the third out.

The Diamond team made a futile attempt to do some rallying in their part of the inning when Collins reached base on an error and Rotundo singled. But Foster put on the pressure and forced DeRisi to fly out. He struck out Mitchell and got Marl on a bouncer to second.

The Alcoa boys outthrew the Bristol team, 11-8, and were led by Thompson who collected a double and two singles in four trips to the plate. Angelo and Lawton had a pair of hits each while Joe Sagolla had a

TURKEY BREAKS WITH GERMANY; THE SEVERANCE DOES NOT MEAN TURKEY WILL ENTER WAR ON SIDE OF ALLIES

Future Action in This Respect Will Depend on Attitude Taken by Germany, Premier Saracoglu States — Cabinet Decision Approved by National Assembly

LONDON—Turkey severed diplomatic and economic relations with the Reich today and left the decision of whether the Turks will go to war against Germany up to the Nazis themselves.

The decision of Turkey to cut its ties with the Germans after Ambassador Franz Von Papen reportedly made an 11th hour attempt to maintain relations was announced by the Turkish radio.

The Turkish government, meanwhile, announced officially that diplomatic and economic relations with Nazi Germany will be severed at midnight.

Announcement of the rupture was made by Premier and Acting Foreign Minister Sukru Saracoglu in an address to the Grand National Assembly in Ankara.

Whether Turkey will take up arms against the Reich depends entirely on the attitude which Germany now will take, Saracoglu said.

The Premier emphasized that the move by Turkey did not necessarily mean entry into the war as a belligerent on the side of the Allies but implied that if the Germans gave evidence of hostile reaction the Turks might go over into the Allied camp.

The decision of the cabinet to sever relations was not unexpected since it had been rumored for several days that Turkey was prepared to cut its ties and possibly grant the United Nations use of Turkish bases in accordance with an alliance with the British.

The cabinet's decision was approved by the National Assembly, the broadcast said.

NEW YORK, Aug. 2.—(INS)—Turkey broke relations with Germany today, according to a Turkish home radio broadcast.

Premier Sukru Saracoglu announced that the Turks had broken off diplomatic and economic relations with the Reich, said the broadcast reported by the FCC.

The broadcast said Saracoglu, speaking before the Grand National Assembly in Ankara, stated that the Turkish cabinet, in making its decision to break with Germany, emphasized that the severance of relations did not mean Turkey would enter the war on the side of the Allies.

Future action in this respect, said Saracoglu, would depend on the attitude taken by Germany.

The Turkish transmitter said the cabinet decision had been approved by the National Assembly.

HOMESICK PLENTY NOW

DENVER—(INS)—Billy Frank New, who is 20 and in serious trouble, agrees that "homesickness" is one of the most serious maladies with which a man can suffer. New was one of four men who escaped from the Denver county jail in a sensational break. He and a companion, McLaure K. Brookes, 27, were re-captured near Houston, Tex. "I was homesick and just had to see my folks again," New explained to officers, when he was returned to Denver.

HERE AND THERE IN BUCKS COUNTY TOWNS

Activities of Interest To All In The Various Communities

GLEANED BY SCRIBES

Abram G. Metz, Mainland butcher, has been selected as the first minister of the Perkiomenville Mennonite Mission.

Mr. Metz was chosen in the traditional casting of lots at the church from a field of four nominees. There was a more-than-capacity congregation for the service.

The other candidates named by the congregation for possible selection were Isaac Alderfer, Lansdale R. D.; Isaiah Alderfer, Harleysville; and Walter Alderfer, Telford, R. D.

Bishop Nevin Bender, Delaware, delivered the sermon, and Bishop Arthur Ruth, Line Lexington, ordained the chosen man immediately after the lot-casting. Assisting bishops were Rev. John Lapp, Lansdale, and Rev. Warren Bean Creamery.

The last of a series of community services held this season on the lawn of Salem Reformed Church, Doylestown, and sponsored by the Doylestown Christian Council took place Sunday evening with a large number of persons in attendance.

The service was in recognition of the 25th anniversary of the pastorate of the Reformed Church, Doylestown, on August 6, 1919.

Representing the laymen and the community at large, Judge Hiram H. Keller gave a short talk, during which he commented upon the work of Dr. Freeman since he became pastor here.

The sermon, which also was appropriate to the occasion, was delivered by Rev. Alexander B. Davidson, pastor of the Methodist church. Vocal solos were rendered by Mrs. Lauretta Carver Worthington, who was accompanied by Mrs. Walter J. Groman.

The Reformed congregation will celebrate the 25th anniversary of Dr. Freeman's pastorate next Sunday.

Attendance at the sale of real estate and personal property of the late Jennie K. Edwards, Doylestown, on Saturday afternoon was quite large and throughout the auction, during which E. Newlin Brown, of this place, served as auctioneer good prices were received.

The real estate, which consisted of a one and one half story frame bungalow at 443 Maple avenue, was sold to an undisclosed buyer for $5800.

Included among the household articles were a large number of antiques, most of which brought good prices. A set of old blue dishes went to the highest bidder for $41, and coverlets ranged in price from $12 to $15. Various types of glassware also sold quite readily.

After several rapid rounds of bidding a maple bed was sold for $75, and old-fashioned parlor lamps sold very well for $3 to $8.

Setting aside their duties for the day, the members and friends of Middletown Grange took out time Sunday to attend a picnic in the meadow on the farm of Mr. and Mrs. John Thompson, Newtown township.

Approximately 80 members and friends attended the event, which

INSURANCE AGAINST TYRANNY

(Doylestown Intelligencer, August 2nd)

From the dawn of civilization, man has mastered the world by being able to use dangerous implements and forces. Fire, wind and running water, steam, gunpowder and electricity—each has been harnessed.

The cunning with which mankind has controlled these unwilling servants has left a permanent mark on human intelligence. Boldness is no more important than prudence. Ingenuity finds tools, caution makes them usable. Therefore we have bridles for horses, jockeysticks for bulls, sheaths for knives, safety-catches for guns, brakes for automobiles.

When communities began, man found government useful but dangerous. The need for controlling government has been one of the driving forces of human endeavor. Through all the centuries of history we can trace the struggle for mastery between peoples and their governments.

The struggle is still going on. We can watch its development in the United States, as well as see its results in the rest of the world. The present war is merely further proof of a well-demonstrated fact — desolation results when government is allowed to get beyond the control of the people who put it in power.

No one can fail to be impressed by reflecting how much better off the German people would be today if they had permitted Hitler to become only what he proclaimed himself, "the leader," and had prevented his becoming what he really strove for, the master.

For more than ten years after the end of the first World War, the German people had reasonably effective control of their government. Hitler did not seize power so much as take it by fraud. When he suppressed the authority of the Reichstag, it was not so much a revolution as a swindle.

He became dictator by promising the German people material and spiritual benefits. He had no real interest in whether they got these benefits—in fact, he knew they could not be achieved. What he wanted was power. He got it by promises he never intended to keep.

The American people have been in control of their government for more than a century and a half. The Constitution binds public officials to public will by means of certain restrictions and limitations upon official authority.

These checks and balances have never impeded a chief executive willing to be part of a team, willing to perform his duties within the scope of the Constitutional plan. But they have been a recurring source of annoyance and irritation to such Presidents as have attempted one-man rule.

Whatever may have been the motive, the effect of the plausible arguments of the New Deal for twelve years — "Give us the power; we will make you more secure" — is just as dangerous to the people of this nation as were the similar pleas which made Hitler master of Germany.

It is a political swindle to ask people to surrender

MAN'S BODY FOUND ALONG RIVER SHORE

Corpse Identified As That of Ernest W. Zaehring, Bristol Township

MISSING FOR 2 WEEKS

The body of the man found in the marshes off Mouth Apron, below the Mill street boat wharf, yesterday afternoon, was later identified as that of Ernest W. Zaehring, 53, Orchard avenue, Bristol Township.

The finding of the body was reported to the Bristol police by Arthur Swangler, who had been informed of its presence by two men in a row boat who gave their names as James Boyle, 333 East Pearl street, and Wade Daniels, colored, 133 East Pearl street, Burlington, N. J. The two were rowing along the edge of the "candocks" when they saw the body. Swangler was standing on the shore near the "Point" when the two Burlington men called to him. The body was in the "candocks" about 30 feet from the "Point." It was lying below the high water mark with an arm and leg partly over a log as it washed there by high water. The body was fully clothed.

Officers Esterline and Bartle responded and summoned Bucks Corner Alfred Rigby. Rigby was rowed to the scene and then Officer Bartle and the Coroner procured a rope and in the rescue boat of Goodwill Fire Co., No. 3, towed the body into the water and removed it to a point favorable to be taken ashore.

The body was then removed to the morgue of George Molden.

Zaehring resided with his son, William, and for a time was employed as a carpenter at the Hunter Manufacturing Corp. He is survived by his wife Helen, one son, of Bristol; and a brother, Otto, of Florida. Mr. Zaehring had lived here for eight years.

According to the man's surviving son, Zaehring has been missing for about two weeks. He was known to frequent the Mill street boat wharf and it is presumed that he fell into the Delaware river. The body may have been washed onto the marshes and evidently had been there for a number of days.

The Zaehring family for a time made their home on Wilson avenue, Bristol.

Zaehring, a few years ago, conducted a second-hand furniture store on Mill street, opposite the Grand Theatre.

The Rev. Edward K. Knetter, pastor of Harbison Methodist Church, will conduct the service on Thursday at the convenience of the family.

SCHOOL BOARD TO CONSIDER FUTURE BUILDING PROGRAM

Will Consult Architect and Visit Some Modern School Buildings

WANTS TO HAVE DATA

H. Stackhouse, Catasauqua, Named Physical Education Director and Coach

Some post-war thinking along the lines of additional school facilities was indulged in last night by the Bristol School Board, which was in session four and one-half hours. The board is of the opinion that many of the school buildings here are so old that the upkeep is becoming costly and that more room is badly needed in several departments.

The Board decided to seek the advice of an architect and to visit some modern school buildings, in an effort to obtain ideas and information, so that when the time arrives to give more serious thought to the project the Board will be fortified with the necessary data.

Harold Stackhouse, Catasauqua, was elected physical education director and coach. He at once accepted the position pending his release from his present position. Stackhouse has been successful in coaching athletics and last year his team won the Lehigh Valley football championship. He has been coaching since 1929 and is also qualified to teach the sciences, history and social studies.

Two new faculty members were elected when Miss Margaret Nicholas, Mansfield, and John A. Campbell, Malvern, were named teachers. Miss Nicholas will teach English and commercial arithmetic, while Mr. Campbell will teach physics.

The resignations of Miss Elizabeth Forsyth, Phyllis K. Clark and Cardin Brown were accepted.

O'Donnell Brothers were awarded the contract to furnish 200 or more tons of bituminous coal at $9 per ton for delivery to the high school building and Jefferson avenue building, and at $8.80 per ton for delivery to the Washington street, Wood street and Bath street buildings.

The Board voted to again engage the services of a collecting agency to collect the per capita taxes due for the years 1942 and 1943.

SAME DOSE FOR KOISO

The new Japanese government of Premier Gen. Kuniaki Koiso is now in office. It lost no time in announcing its intentions, at least as far as the outside world is concerned.

"Japan's foreign policy in general and East Asia in particular will remain absolutely unchanged," said a spokesman for the Koiso cabinet.

Well and good—not that the word of a Japanese official spokesman is to be regarded as anything approaching gospel truth, but in the case of the new regime it's all there is to go on. And in the case of the Allies, it's all they need to go on. If the Japanese policy is to remain absolutely unchanged, so is the Allied policy, and that is to crush Japanese militarism, aggression and exploitation beyond hope of recognition.

An interesting sidelight on the debut of the new Japanese government is what it did with Gen. Hideki Tojo, the immediate— and fallen—predecessor of General Koiso. Not only has Tojo been stripped of the half-dozen jobs he held as premier, but he has even been put on the army retired list, which is pretty drastic treatment for a general only 59 years old.

It seems a little peculiar for a government to accept absolutely unchanged the policy of a preceding government and then shove the head of that preceding government completely into the discard, but then the Japs are peculiar people.

But the Allies don't need to be too much concerned with General Koiso and his policies. All they need to do is keep plugging at the task of seeing that Koiso and his successors meet the same fate that overtook Tojo—defeat and failure.

CHILDREN COME FIRST

News that Britain already has moved 100,000 children out of the immediate danger zone in the rocket bomb target area brings home a significant point—that in the democracies, children come first.

Not so in Germany. Not so in Italy. Not so in the satellite Axis nations. Not so in Japan. There, in the land of the aggressors, the children share the fate of the elders. Who has not seen the photos from the war fronts of children in rags, in stark terror, taking the most awful punishment of their lives?

From the moment the war began, England was ruthless in one respect. Her children had to be protected, even to the point of shipping them across the seas. And in this country, civilian defense agencies had plans all worked out for the movement of children to places of comparative safety in the event that war came to these shores.

It is a significant point, one that calls attention to the difference between rule by the state and rule by the people themselves.

Prediction has been made war against Germany may end by January. At least it will be a cold day for Hitler.

NORTH to DANGER by TOM GILL

CHAPTER THIRTY-THREE

Long shadows lay across the lake when Colin and Selkirk stepped from out the spruce that lined the shore. Their eyes were fixed on something high up in the air—four tiny specks droning toward them from the south, seudding before the wind; three fighter planes and a large two-motor transport. One by one they leveled off and landed; on the wings Colin saw the insignia of the Royal Canadian Air Force.

Eagerly he ran to meet the tall army officer who descended from the transport.

"You're Colonel Dowling," Colin held out his hand.

"Right! You're Colin Rae, of course," he smiled. "We met last summer." Another brief handshake, then he turned to Colin again. "Ready to guide us to that air base?"

"We can leave now."

"How many men did you see there?"

"At least thirty. Maybe more."

Dowling looked back at the transport plane. "I brought a few machine gunners who'll be very glad to entertain them. You said you had a sketch map of the shoreline—where is it?"

"In my cabin."

Together the three men hurried up the path, but just outside the cabin Colin paused. Curled in a patch of sunlight, Irina's pup lay lazily whining, and with a vague sense of disquiet Colin threw open the door. But now he smiled in relief—head on the table, cheek pillowed in her hand, Irina sat, her back flung over her shoulder.

Still smiling, Rae glanced back at Selkirk and stopped inside. Then—his heart stopped. An old memory, a memory cold as death itself clutched at him. Again he envisioned Van Downe slumped forward at his desk. He took one shuddering step forward and raised the girl's shoulders. The head fell limply back. In that second the world turned red.

Colin saw Selkirk kneel, and heard Dowling gasp, "Her neck! It's—"

Without speaking, Colin walked across the room and took an automatic from the wall. He reached for his knowledge.

"Where are you going?" asked Colonel Dowling.

"After Dove." There was death in Colin's eyes.

"Are you sure Dove did this?"

"So sure, I'll get him if it takes a lifetime."

Dowling seized him by the shoulders. "But, man, you can't—not now! There's something more important. No one else can lead us to the air base."

Colin's voice sank menacingly low. "I'm going after Dove."

Deliberately the officer shook him back and forth. "Listen to me, Rae! I want Jonathan Dove just as much as you, but up on the bay enemy bombers are making ready to drop destruction. One bomb bursting on America is worth a thousand Doves to Hitler. We must prevent that."

"Even if Dove escapes?"

With stern, drawn faces the two men stood at gaze, then Colin repeated, "I'm going after Dove! Out of my way, Colonel—"

But Selkirk cut him off. "If Nazi bombs fall on Canada or the United States what answer will you make to the dead and dying?"

The stricken voice ceased. Once more Selkirk was kneeling beside Irina's silent form, while across the room Dowling waited.

A tremor passed through Colin's body, then very slowly he straightened. "I'll go," he murmured.

Dowling hurried out to the planes. But within the cabin Colin stood, his somber eyes on an aging, broken man, and the cold white face of a girl who had kissed him once; who had sat there smiling on his bunk, not so very long ago. . . .

With strangely clumsy fingers Colin lifted a strand of the hair that had always reminded him of a wolf's pelt. "I'm going now"—his lips were stiff—"I'm going, but I'll be back—for Dove."

A moment later, with a growl of angry motors, the warplanes took the air.

Seated beside Colonel Dowling, Colin felt the transport climb for the upper air. He looked about him: the plane was filled with soldiers in army overcoats, each holding an automatic rifle, and through the window he saw the ice-covered Nelson, its banks already in shadow beneath the sinking sun.

The Colonel began talking of Dove. "It was the picture you found in Van Downe's cabin that gave us the clue. Two days ago I had a complete report from Intelligence in England. An amazing tale! As a mild-mannered, public-spirited citizen of Canada, Dove served Germany for over a quarter of a century."

"We first got track of him when he joined the Royal Air Force, in 1916, under the name of Proctor. He was in the same aviation class with Van Downe. In spite of his small size he soon became an exceptional flier. When his squadron got to France he was made test pilot. And again, according to the records, he showed himself thoroughly dependable. Finally they gave him a newly perfected bomb sight to test—something the Allies had been working on for more than a year. The thing was to be kept absolutely secret, and that very day Dove flew with it over the lines and landed at a German airdrome."

"That was the first scrap of evidence the army had that this man Proctor, or Dove, as he later called himself, was a German spy. Dove's commanding officer barely missed the court-martial. Six months later Dove was reported killed. But his death turned out to be a little premature. Recently, the British agents learned that Dove was not dead. His plane had crashed, and his face was so badly battered that he was unrecognizable. It was built up again by plastic surgery, completely changed, so that only the eyes remained the same."

"We lost sight of him until in the Hitler regime he came back to Canada with a different face and name, to join the fifth column working here and in the U.S.A."

Col. Dowling stroked his chin. "You can't help admiring the thoroughness of those Teuton terrorists. For the last few years it's been Dove's job to learn more about the south shore of Hudson Bay than any living man. We've always recognized that, in case of war, the bay is our weak link. It's the second largest bay on earth, and it's not an arctic sea so many people think—it's no farther north than London or Berlin. Its waters are navigable the year round.

"With long cruising bombers, the Germans could paralyze the nerve centers of all eastern America—provided they could find suitable places to base along the bay. That's what Dove's been working on, and that's why I tell you I want him as badly as you do. He probably has a more complete set of pictures of the south shore, with its landing possibilities, than we have. And I can't let those pictures reach the German High Command."

"Haven't they already?"

Dowling shook his head. "I doubt it. Those midnight trips to meet the reconnaissance plane would mean that Dove's job isn't quite finished."

The Colonel leaned forward. "What's your idea about that plane?"

"It came from the south—maybe Winnipeg, or the United States. Wherever it came from, I believe it would start out innocently enough, as if on a pleasure trip or a hunting trip, and when it got to their meeting place, Dove would help refuse it and install the cameras. On its return, he would take out the cameras and film, and the plane could go back in perfect security and land at any Canadian or U. S. airdrome. But he knew he had to hurry, for the United States is cracking down more and more on private planes."

"Then Dove kept the photographic equipment here in Learmonth."

Colin nodded. "In a secret room that he built himself at the school. He had drums of film, developing pans, chemicals—everything."

Dowling laid his hand on Colin's knee. "And Dove would have got by with it, too, except for you."

"And Blair Benedict," Colin added. "She did more than I."

"The other glanced at his watch, then peered out the window. Steadily the winter sun sank until it touched the lake, turning the great expanse of ice to softest opal. . . .

At last Colin pointed toward the northern horizon. "Up there is where Blair and I landed. We're about seven miles from the air base now and it's not safe to go much closer. You'd better come in now."

A word from Dowling to the pilot, and the three planes began spiraling downward. It was almost dark when they landed in the spectral twilight of an arctic night. The agents buried themselves making ready for the night. No fires were allowed, but they heaped up mounds of snow and laid their sleeping bags behind them, while Dowling gathered his squad leaders about the rough sketch map Rae had drawn.

"Timing is the important thing," the Colonel cautioned his men. "You pilots give us two hours' start, then come over low. Try not to destroy their bombers unless they resist or take off. If they do—riddle them!"

Dowling drew his everdown closer about him and settled himself for the night.

Popular Ballerina is the Guest of Bucks Countians

RUSHLAND, Aug. 2 — Portrait painter Maximilian Vanka and Mrs. Vanka have had as their guest at their home here, Mia Slavenska, popular ballerina, who a few weeks ago was the "girl of the cover" on a leading weekly magazine.

Miss Slavenska is staying at the Vanka home while Mr. Vanka is painting her portrait.

The popular ballerina, who has starred in the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo, and who is now touring the country with her own company, is presenting American Indian dances and dances based on Negro spirituals.

Miss Slavenska's international skills are a natural product of her history. She was born in a small Yugoslav village, studied dancing in Zagreb, debuted there as a child, went to Paris at the age of sixteen to work with Russian dancers, notably Madame Nijinska, and met up with David Tishmar, a dyed-in-the-wool American (descended from Indians and Western pioneers), who became her partner and choreographer.

Most of the dances she and Tishmar evolve have a folklore flavor, but they themselves can't always tell which folk they have in mind, Europeans or Americans.

The costume she wears in the cover photograph of two weeks ago is definitely Yugoslav, designed by her artist countryman and Rusland host, Maxo Vanka.

HOME RUN SCORES VICTORY FOR THE PRISON OFFICERS IX

Home Run by Lodge Represented Wingers' Only Scoring

WITH CALDERONE ON Arrows Made Seven Hits and Seven Went Down on Strikes

TRENTON INDUSTRIAL LEAGUE
Schedule for Tonight
Eastern Aircraft - Voltz-Texaco
(Edgely diamond)
American Steel - Rohm & Haas
(Maple Beach field)

TRENTON, N. J., Aug. 2—A home run from the bat of Claude Lodge with Calderone on base in the sixth inning represented all the Fleetwings' scoring last evening on Wezel field as the league-leading Prison Officers downed the Wingers, 7-2, in an Industrial League match.

Calderone had walked when Lodge planted the ball over the right field fence for his second hit of the evening. The Arrows had seven hits and seven went down on strikes. The Wingers attempted a rally in the final frame when with two out, D'Ascendis singled and Heisler reached base on an error but Dugan whiffed for the third out.

Cy Bachman who hurled for the Bristol team ran into difficulty in the first inning when Risoldi reached base on an error, Sabo walked, and Broderick singled. The next two were infield outs but Barados singled for two more runs.

Walks to Barnhart and Jones, plus two errors, and a base hit by Ginzak gave the Trenton team another pair of runs in the sixth.

A win for the Eastern Aircraft team against Voltz-Texaco this evening will play the Trenton aircraft workers one full game behind the Fleetwings team for third place.

The Rohm & Haas team is making a desperate attempt to vacate the cellar and will meet the American Steel nine.

County Ambulance Offered N. Carolina

plies were offered to the North Carolina Department of Health to aid in handling of the 416 cases of infantile paralysis.

In a telephone conversation from North Carolina Sunday, Dr. Allen H. Moore, head of the medical division of the Bucks County Council, was informed that a check-up in that state showed the epidemic to be under control.

"If we need your equipment and emergency supplies, you can rest assured that we will send a driver for the ambulance," Dr. Moore was informed. "Your offer is deeply appreciated."

The epidemic which is centered around the Hickory, N. C., section, is confined to rural areas.

Urge Training For Bucks County "Vets"

county veterans. The whole idea of sending our returning veterans to take up residence in Philadelphia or other points while receiving vocational training is not favorable to this committee, and we propose to do something about it."

County Superintendent Charles H. Boehm has said in this connection: "The opportunity for vocational training in Bucks county for returning veterans is just about sufficient to take care of about one or two per cent of our veterans. The need for expansion of existing facilities is apparent, and the possibilities for a new alignment should receive the active interest of all of us who expect our men to return soon to civil life."

"This," Mr. Murray says, "places the future life of thousands of veterans into safe hands for guidance, and we will not fail them."

work opportunities for Negroes.

War plant production fell from 25 to 70 per cent on the first day of the strike, and even greater loss was threatened today. Retail business was practically at a standstill, and all bars and state liquor stores were closed as a precautionary measure.

Up to an early hour today, no serious injuries were reported from the violence outbreaks. Two white men in a coal truck were reportedly beaten by Negroes, and two other white men were dragged from a passenger car and beaten. A 16-year-old youth and a white woman driver were also beaten.

A Yellow Cab Company driver, who said he was under orders not to drive through the negro districts, reported that at least one cab had been stoned and overturned.

The share-the-ride spirit among private car owners, which enabled thousands of persons to get to their jobs yesterday, was not expected to prevail today, following the attacks on automobile operators.

Frank Carney, president of the former PRT employees union, which held a contract with the company until it was defeated in a national labor relations board election five months ago, declared frankly that "we don't want negroes and we won't work with negroes."

The TWU, which had protested the promotion of negro employees, announced that it has asked U. S. Attorney General Francis Biddle, to investigate, contending that the wildest walkout was inspired by enemy agents in the hope of inciting race riots and stalling production in the nation's second largest war industry area.

The War Manpower Commission directive, ordering the company to end its discriminatory hiring practice, went into effect last month.

Only eight negroes had been accepted for training as trainmen up to yesterday, and none of these had as yet operated a car other than one brief practice run.

Officials of the Army and Navy, War Production Board, War Labor Board and the union met late last night after fruitless efforts at each of the depts to get the workers to quit the work stoppage.

Orville H. Bullitt, regional WPB director, indicated that he would request that troops be sent in if the situation does not improve today.

PTC officials, meanwhile, suggested the equal treatment for negroes be rescinded at least temporarily and the old personnel policy be reinstated. The plan was abandoned, however, when Federal spokesmen indicated that such action could be taken only at the company's responsibility.

Dr. A. A. Mitten, P. T. C. official, appealed to the idle workers to name their leaders "so we can talk to them in an effort to get them to go back to work."

The work stoppage, which began at 4 a. m. yesterday and became complete by early afternoon, left approximately 1900 street cars, 650 buses and the entire subway-elevated system idle. Only 10 per cent of the normal load of 1,500,000 passengers were carried before the breakdown. P. T. C. officials said, About 500,000 persons went to work in private cars under the share-the-ride plan, while the remaining 850,000 either walked or stayed home.

KNOW YOUR STATE

Since the official decennial census of population of April 1, 1940, estimates by several governmental agencies and private organizations have been made public. These estimates probably were more necessary in the past three years than at any time in our history because of the numerous population shifts which have occurred in many sections of our State and nation due to wartime industrial expansion.

Many of these estimates differ in character and while most of them are useful for some purpose, care should be exercised in selecting the proper one and a thorough analysis made of its significance. The U. S. Bureau of

Believes Enemy Thinks Only of Defense and Withdrawal

With the British Forces in France—After another night of lightning raids, the capture of half a dozen more villages and commanding features and the consolidation of the 13 miles deep salient south of Caumont, a senior staff officer said today:

"I do not think the enemy has anything more in his mind than defense and withdrawal."

Among the places stormed and captured are Le Beny Bocage, Feuguerolles-Sur-Scoilles, La Baccille, northwest of Le Quesnay, Robin and Breuil and Point 230 on the main Caumont-Ayney-Sur-Odon road. Juncques, east of the Bois Du Homme, and La Ferriere Au Doyen northwest of the Bois Du Homme.

The Germans are falling back on several sectors although there is no evidence yet of a general withdrawal.

"Threatened with disaster, it seems the Germans have no choice now but to stand and fight it out," said a staff officer.

fundamental rights and protections in exchange for benefits and help which they could receive quite as well without sacrifice of independence and control of their government. Calling the benefits "Social Security" and "The More Abundant Life" doesn't lessen the deception which is involved.

There is no part of the Social Security program which could not have been carried out as well inside the Constitution as outside it. There never has been any excuse for using Social Security and other New Deal projects as levers to weaken our form of government.

Freedom is, after all, the most precious and important of the "social gains" mankind has ever made.

The Constitution puts the express train of government under a series of block-signal controls. These controls are for the protection of the people of this nation. But when the present administration really gets up steam, it is in too much of a hurry to want to slow down for amber and red lights.

What the New Deal has been asking is that the people of this nation permit it to discard all "Caution" and "Stop" signals, and allow the brain-trusters to operate only under green lights, as fast as they please, regardless of what may be ahead on the tracks.

SLOW INFIELD HIT OF ANGELO GIVES ALCOA IX THE GAME

Diamond Nine Loses Game Played On Maple Beach Diamond

FINAL SCORE IS 6 TO 5

De Risi Had Just Relieved Wolvin When Angelo Hit a Single

A slow infield single from the bat of Tony Angelo gave the Alcoa team a 6-5 victory over Diamond last evening on the Maple Beach field. Angelo's hit in the seventh inning scored Freddie Hibbs from second base.

"Mike" DeRisi was on the mound when Angelo got his hit. DeRisi had just relieved Wolvin to pitch to Angelo. DeRisi then retired Thompson for the third out.

The Diamond team made a futile attempt to do some rallying in their part of the inning when Collins reached base on an error and Rotundo singled. But Foster put on the pressure and forced DeRisi to fly out. He struck out Mitchell and got Mari on a bounder to second.

The Alcoa boys outthrew the Bristol team, 11-8, and were led by Thompson who collected a double and two singles in four trips to the plate. Angelo and Lawton had a pair of hits each while Joe Sagolla had a
